EnerTech joins XPV and Walsingham to invest in Emerging Water Technology Company in the Oil and Gas Sector

MAY 7, 2010

“Water remediation is a critical environmental issue for the oil and gas sector. FilterBoxx has developed a strong suite of products and technologies which address the rapidly growing process water market segment. Our investment in FilterBoxx fits squarely within our investment landscape around water technologies in energy. We are pleased to be partnered in this investment with XPV and Walsingham”

EnerTech III Invests in FilterBoxx Water & Environmental

Toronto, Ontario - EnerTech Capital III announced today that they along with Walsingham Fund and lead investor XPV Capital have closed an investment in Calgary based FilterBoxx Water & Environmental Corp. In conjunction with the financing, EnerTech Managing Director Wally Hunter along with John Coburn of XPV will join the board of Filterboxx.

FilterBoxx is a leading provider of mission critical potable water, wastewater, and process water treatment equipment and services to the oil and gas industry. FilterBoxx has built an excellent reputation in the oil and gas industry as a provider of high quality products and services to help major energy companies address their water issues. With emerging water issues in SAGD oil sand extraction, tailings water treatment, Frac Gas and enhanced oil recovery, FilterBoxx is in a position to continue growing while helping oil and gas companies minimize water consumption by reusing water, reducing energy consumption, and increasing efficiency.

More information is available on the company's website at www.filterboxx.com.
